Dear K-K Families:

Welcome back! This mid-week update comes with two purposes. First, I wanted to publicly state how thrilled I am that Julie will be taking over the classroom when I go on maternity leave. This will insure a smooth transition for everyone, and provides great peace of mind for me.

Secondly, Julie and I are hoping to schedule parent conferences prior to my departure from the classroom. While no one can guarantee anything with pregnancy, my scheduled last day is April 9. To be on the safe side, Julie and I have scheduled several dates for conferences, many of which fall outside of the “typical” conference schedule, in the hope of fitting everyone in before I have to leave. The schedule is attached so that you may review your calendars and hopefully find a date and time that will work for your family. The schedule is also posted outside of the classroom. Please come in to sign up for a conference. If you are unable to do so, please send me a note with a few possible times, and I will do my best to honor your requests.

Thank you in advance for your flexibility. Julie and I are looking forward to seeing you!

Sincerely,

Lynn
