

Fright Night

On a cool Halloween night, there was an elephant named Bob trick-or-treating by himself. He was dressed up as a human, and his Halloween bag was a sea shell. He went over to his friend Sheldon's house where all his other friends, Merlin and Patrick were waiting for Bob. Bob saw that they were all dressed like humans too. When they were ready, they left with their pillow cases and went off to get some candy in their cool yellow car. When they had hit every house, Bob wanted to go to one more. It was an old abandoned haunted house on the top of a hill covered in maple leaves.

At first Sheldon, Merlin, and Patrick didn't want to go, but they decided to go because it might be fun. Once they got to the house, everyone was scared except for Bob. They went in and the door shut right behind them. This made Bob and all of his friends scared. They walked in and searched the house to see if anyone was there. They didn't see anyone, but they could hear rickety cricks in the floor above them. Once Bob and his friends heard this they wanted to leave right away, but they could. Someone in the house had locked it from the outside. As they stepped back from the door someone had jumped down and scared them. Quickly Marlin tied up the bear in his unbreakable ribbon. Bob saw who it was, it was a big bear but he didn't look that scary. Bob asked why the bear had scared them, and they found out that he only wanted to be friends with them and go trick-or-treating with them.

As they were walking back to Sheldon's house, they hit a few more houses so that the bear could have some candy to eat. When they got home they carved some pumpkins, told their parents that they made a new friend, and how it was the greatest Halloween night ever.
