

Kelly's Great Battle vs. Jeremy Xavier III

Kelly lay in her room quietly gazing up at the stars wondering why life was so ordinary when one of the stars moved. It slowly descended into Kelly's window giving her quite a fright. The star slowly turned into a figure, growing to be about two feet taller than Kelly. It was a man and a strange fellow at that.

He was almost completely bald except for the slightest strand of gray hair on the tip of his head. He had a long nose resembling Squidward's nose. There were warts that covered his entire face. He was a stout man with a small yellow head and long green limbs. He spoke of a world truly bizarre.

"Get away from me funny face!" Kelly shouted out of pure fear.

This made the man grow very angry so angry he shrunk Kelly. Her long ginger hair made her stand out on top of her dresser, her dazzling blue eyes no longer visible. She was the size of a thumb. Completely dazed, Kelly didn't even put up a fight as the strange man carried her off to his land.

The strange man had tried for a while to make Kelly his queen, but all day long she would cry, even through the night. She became so depressing that he abandoned her in this tiny otherworldly desert in hopes that her tears may bring life to the desolate land.

The days grew hot and the nights grew freezing. Her tears would dry up during the day and freeze during the night. Eventually Kelly gave up on crying and instead began to plan her way out. The moment she had stopped crying a camel had appeared. He looked absolutely afraid of Kelly, even though he was twice her size.

"Ya...ya...ya...you're not go....go...going to keep crying are you."The camel murmured as he slowly inched toward her.

"What difference does it make if I cry or not?" Kelly nearly shouted before realizing she did not want to scare him

"Water has long been the enemy of our nation. The king believes our beloved land is cursed because of its extreme conditions, but it is our home and way of life." The camel seemed much wiser now that he wasn't afraid.

Kelly began to realize the evil man is doing what she had just done to him. He was different and so she treated him badly just as he is doing to this poor creature.

"How can I help?" Kelly asked, truly wanting to make up for what she had done.

"The eastern part of this land there is a mirage. There you will find a wand made of wheat. It is sacred among my people. It is what sustains us. I shall guide you there. You may call me Tommy." Tommy explained and so they set foot in search of this mirage.

They traveled with little rest, fighting against the whipping sands of wind. After what seemed like days, the journey to the mirage had come to an end with them obtaining the wand. They used that wand to fight the king, King Jeremy Xavier III. The battle was fought for many days, but on the eighth day, the battle had ended with Kelly victorious. The land the Tommy treasured so dearly became a part of the kingdom, no longer being considered a waste land. Kelly, once again her normal height, apologized to the king for having treated him so coldly and with that she returned home never to think of her adventure again.
